250 MORE SOLDIERS WILL NEED JOBS—PROBLEM GROWS

More than 600 Memphis soldiers will be back within a week. Forty per cent of these will need aid in securing jobs. This will be the biggest job yet for all agencies engaged in the work of getting the returned fighters back into civilian life.

More than a hundred Memphis boys of the 115th artillery, Battery A, are back. At least 600 of the 115th will be here within a week and more are still to come when the line men from the 128th infantry and other units arriving almost daily, return.

Never before have the resources of the United States employment service been so taxed to get the soldier boys jobs. Statistics show that 60 per cent of men discharged from the army step into positions without aid. Thus 40 per cent of the men are compelled to turn for aid in getting employment and most of them have to be taken care of by the United States employment service. Memphis therefore will have to care for more than 250 men in a week.

Appeal to Employers.

Business men have been taxed a great deal during and after the fighting. Patriotic appeal after appeal has been made from all quarters to get the soldier boy a job. The problem has been the same for the past several years. It is to face with the economic facts. A body of men—real, red-blooded men—capable of work—hard work—any kind of work are here.

REVEALS NEW ARMY PLAN TO LIGHTEN PRISONERS' TERMS

Colonel Hunt Has in Force System Whereby Man Under Sentence Can Rejoin Command by Good Conduct.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Heavy court-martial sentences of life imprisonment or such terms as 20 and 30 years are reduced to a minimum of months by a plan permitted under army regulations which has been introduced into the disciplinary barracks at Governor's Island by the commandant, Col. John E. Hunt.

There are between 600 and 700 prisoners at present in the barracks. Eighty of the men are from overseas and about half are serving sentences for military offenses, including one life term, several of 20 years and a few for less periods. What these sentences really mean was explained by Col. Hunt. "In practice," he said, "men serving 10, 20, 30 years or life sentences, are really sentenced to indeterminate terms. When a man comes here we make a careful investigation of his whole life from boyhood. All the circumstances involving his offense are reviewed and if his general conduct is and has been good, he can apply for restoration after three months. Such application is rarely, if ever, denied and within six months from the time he was convicted he may rejoin his regiment to complete his service and receive an honorable discharge.

"There has been a good deal of criticism of these sentences imposed by courts-martial, but I believe it has been largely due to the public misunderstanding of the facts. Such sentences have been imposed purely because of their deterrent effect and I am convinced they have saved thousands of young men from getting into trouble."

The extraordinary small proportion of men convicted of serious offenses in the American army was emphasized by Col. Hunt.

"Out of about 4,000,000 men who joined the colors," he said, "there are only about 5,000 in the three military prisons at Leavenworth, Alcatraz and Fort Leavenworth. The rest of the army is made up of men with criminal records in civil life. We know 3,000 of these by name and half of that number are included in the 5,000 now in the three military prisons."

One of the principal features of the rehabilitation scheme introduced into Fort Jay under Col. Hunt is the "honor system." Two companies have been formed of prisoners with good records and these men are put on their honor without any interference from the prison officials. They occupy a barracks apart from the fort, work under their own noncommissioned officers and even detail their own guards.

ALLIES DECIDE KASER MUST BE TRIED AS WAR CRIMINAL

PARIS, April 18. (By the Associated Press.)—The responsibility of the German emperor for the war and the means for bringing him to trial by one of the allied governments, probably Belgium, have been definitely determined upon by the council of four. This follows the definite decision on the terms of reparations for war damages, whereby $5,000,000,000 must be paid within the next two years, and an inter-allied commission assesses the remaining damage for a period of 30 years, beginning May 1, 1921.

Thus, two of the great obstacles in the path of the rapid attainment of peace have been removed and the period of extreme tension over the situation and the failure to secure tangible results is succeeded by revived confidence over the advance made toward a permanent settlement.

How far these results are due to the intimations conveyed by the summoning to France of the United States transport George Washington by President Wilson is only conjectural. But it is at least a coincidence that the main difficulties began to dissolve from the time that this decision became known.

The exact nature of these difficulties are not disclosed. Friends of the president maintain that they were largely of a minor character, not involving large principles, though the president's adherence to his "14 points" as the rigid limitation of the scope of action appears to have run all through the deliberations during the tense period of the last few days.

While the tension has been greatly reduced, it is not entirely removed as much depends on the continuation of progress with respect to the remaining obstacles, notably the Saar valley, the Rhine frontier, the Adriatic issue and a number of lesser issues which are still short of final agreement.

The text of the reparations clause, as finally approved by the council of four, specifies that enemy countries must admit responsibility for all loss and damages to allied and associated nations and their citizens due to unjustifiable aggression.

The council of four reached an agreement yesterday afternoon on the Saar valley. The agreement leaves sovereignty over the valley unchanged, but according to France, free of duty, sufficient coal for the Lorraine industry and to replace the production of the mines destroyed in the Lens mining district with the privilege to the Germans of restoring the Lens mines and thus relieving the Saar valley of that charge. This agreement removes one of the most difficult obstacles to the conclusion of peace.

President Wilson left the "White House" after the meeting of the council of four yesterday for the first time since his illness. With Rear-Admiral Grayson, his personal physician, he motored about town in a limousine.
